John Anderson, alias Augustus Walbus, born in Copenhagen, Denmark, left his native home at the age of 21 to escape rigid military training. His departure from Denmark was made in a small sailboat with a few buddies. Later they were picked up by a boat. Upon arrival in America, he made his way to Chicago. During his stay in Chicago, he was employed by the B & O Railroad under the foremanship of a Swedish gentleman named Anderson. From this man Augustus Walbus legally changed his name to John Anderson.

Helping lay the B & O Railroad, he worked his way into Nappanee, Indiana. Upon reaching Nappanee, several of them were boarded at the home of David Hochstetler. While staying at this home, he got acquainted with the German people and their language. In the Hochstetler family was a young daughter Lovina, with whom he fell in love.

Due to difficulties in the church, Bishop Hochstetler and his family left Marshall County and headed for their new home in Newton County. Arriving in their wagons, they settled on a farm northwest of Mt. Ayr, Indiana. John followed the family to be near Lovina, the 10th child of David and Susanna (Yoder) Hochstetler. Before permission was granted for the marriage, John Anderson joined with the Amish faith and learned to speak the German language.

John and Lovina were married on November 18, 1880 with the bride's father performing the marriage.

Settling down to married life near North Star, in a log cabin they began the task of raising a family. All their married life was spent near and around Mount Ayr, Indiana. During this time, 10 children, of which 8 survived, were born to them.
